Dear Friends,

We are pleased you’ve joined us this evening as we return to Revels’ English roots. The past season of ups and downs reminds us more than ever of how important it is to come together to celebrate old traditions and community with families and friends.

In a sense, you are a part of the village it takes to build our Revels. This year much of our energy was focused on partnerships and education. Our vibrant community collaborations enabled RiverSing to flourish and SummersDay Revels to expand. We are grateful to our media partners who helped us to bring you to The Christmas Revels.

Our Education Programs featuring workshops and residencies in schools, a lively touring company, and after-school and vacation programs are in demand. But there are other subtler, unexpected, educational bonuses. Each year we reap the benefits of having worked with so many children. We’ve watched them sing “There Was a Pig Went out to Dig” as children, become teenagers, head off to college, and return as adults to design our set, play the fiddle, teach morris and sword dancing in our after-school programs, be assistant stage and production managers, facilitate Revels retreats, mend costumes during the run of the show, load trucks in and out of the theater, and dance with Pinewoods Morris Men. And this year onstage, we have a grandparent and grandchild singing together —so, the tradition goes on.

As I sit in the audience with you, I am deeply gratified to see this new generation carrying on the traditions of old, and to witness their commitment to Revels. We thank you all for helping to make this possible.

Executive Director
2. The Lass of Richmond Hill
A morris dance in the Fieldtown tradition. The collector Cecil Sharp’s introduction to morris dancing was courtesy of a team dancing (out of season) in a light winter snow.

3. Somerset Wassail
Cecil Sharp collected this carol early in the twentieth century from the Drayton wassailers in Somerset, part of the region that Hardy called Wessex in his novels.

4. Portugal New / O Come All Ye Faithful
This venerable carol is first heard in the rural, rough-hewn west gallery style of music-making that Hardy describes so vividly in novels, then in a more familiar arrangement by David Willcocks.

5. Clogging
A selection of steps from hornpipes, popular competition dances. Hornpipes were danced in many places, by sailors on shipboard, and in the mills of the North Country. The tune is “Click Go the Shears.”

6. How Happy’s the Man
A convivial drinking song found in the manuscripts of Thomas Hardy, arranged by Dave Townsend and Charles Spicer.

7. The Triumph
The most popular longways country dance in nineteenth-century England. It is the first dance at Tranter Dewy’s Christmas party in Under the Greenwood Tree.

8. Sans Day Carol
Traditional carol from Cornwall, unusual for its associating the Virgin Mary with the holly tree, a masculine symbol in folk mythology. Sans Day, or St. Day (the name of the village of origin in Cornwall), probably refers to the Breton Saint Dei.

9. Lord Strange
This tune first appears in print in 1705, and variations of it are found in village musicians’ compilations throughout England.

10. Arise and Hail the Joyful Day
A characteristic blend of voices and instruments in the west gallery style, this carol is mentioned in Under the Greenwood Tree.

11. Songs and Games for Children

We’ve Been Awhile A-Wandering
A Yorkshire wassail song with many variants, including “God Rest Ye Merry, Gentlemen.”

There Was a Pig Went Out to Dig
An old agrarian mummers’ carol linking the Christmas season to the cycle of planting and harvesting.

12. Lord of Misrule
An appointment related to the medieval Feast of Fools.
13. Boar’s Head Carol
This carol has been sung at Queen’s College, Oxford, since the seventeenth century, as the celebrated dish is borne into the dining hall.

14. Awake, Awake Ye Mortals All
A carol for women’s voices found in the Hardy family manuscripts in Puddletown, where many of Hardy’s kinfolk lived and made music.

THE VILLAGE WOMEN
JAMES MAILHOT, BASS CLARINET

15. Portesham Feast Dance
A community dance at the Portesham Feast (“Poss’am Fez” in local dialect) in the West Dorset village of Portesham. The tune goes by many names, including “The Tune the Old Cow Died Of.”

THE VILLAGE DANCERS
THE MELLSTOCK BAND

16. God Rest Ye Merry, Gentlemen
This famous “luck-visit” tune is first given in a rollicking “street” version reminiscent of “We’ve Been Awhile A-Wandering,” followed by a more modern version for the full company.

17. Tolling the Devil’s Knell
A poem by Patrick Swanson. Many English churches ring their bells on Christmas Eve, and a few still toll “passing bells” to indicate the age and sex of a dead parishioner; but All Saint’s, Dewsbury, is the only church left which still rings “The Devil’s Knell.” Beginning at about 10 p.m., the tenor bell sounds as many strokes as there are years since Christ’s nativity, the last timed exactly to coincide with the first chime of midnight, when in folk tradition Satan died. Each year the devil bounces back and another stroke must be added to his knell. The custom’s origin is unrecorded, but it certainly dates from well before 1828, when it was revived “after a lapse of some years.”

RENNI BOY

18. The Lord of the Dance
Sydney Carter’s modern lyrics to the Shaker Song “Simple Gifts” are here translated into dance using a compilation of traditional English morris dance steps by Carol Langstaff, Martin Graetz and Jonathan Morse.

INTERMISSION

PART II

19. Abbots Bromley Horn Dance
An ancient ritual for good luck in hunting the stag, still danced every year in the village of Abbots Bromley in England. Its four supernumerary characters link it with the mumming traditions of Christmas.

PINWOODS MORRIS MEN
DAVID COFFIN, RECORDER
20. God’s Dear Son
From Some Ancient Christmas Carols (1822), compiled from Cornish manuscripts by the scientist and antiquarian Gilbert Davies, in the original two-part setting. The tune is a variant of the dance tune “Chestnut” or “Dove’s Figary.”

Mary Casey
The Village Women

21. The Oxen
A poem by Thomas Hardy expressing nostalgia for the religious faith he has lost, and imagining the Christmas story as it might be experienced today.

Tim Sawyer

22. While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night (‘Winchester’)
This hymn text, a paraphrase of St. Luke’s gospel account of the announcement of Jesus’ birth, enjoys more musical settings than possibly any other, numbering in the hundreds. The tune dates from before 1600.

Mary Casey, Harmonium
The Village Quire

23. While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night (‘Lyngham’)
Composed by Thomas Jarman and published around 1803, this tune is widely sung to this text. Instrumental interludes, or “symphonies,” are characteristic of the west gallery music style.

The Mellsstock Band
The Village Quire

24. Children’s Songs and Dances

Dame, Get Up and Bake your Pies
A song related to the venerable tune “Greensleeves.”

The Holly and the Ivy
This commonly sung carol was collected in Gloucestershire by Cecil Sharp and published in 1911. The ancient pagan male-female symbols of holly and ivy retain their powerful presence in our current-day practice of decorating our homes with evergreens during the winter solstice season.

The Casterbridge Children

25. Arise and Hail the Sacred Day
A fine carol that typifies both the accompanied “church band” style of west gallery music and the duet-style folk carol such as those sung by the Copper family in Sussex.

The Mellsstock Band
The Village Quire

26. Dorset Five-Hand Reel
An informal social dance done by working people in the pub rather than in a ballroom. The step and reel is one of the oldest British Isles dance formations. Tunes are “Dorchester Hornpipe” and “Speed the Plow.”

The Village Dancers

27. Apple Tree Wassail
A Somerset variant of a carol that involves dipping lamb’s wool in cider and hanging it on tree branches to bring good luck for the New Year.

1. Do - na no - bis pa - cem, pa - cem,
2. Do - na no - bis pa - cem,
3. Do - na no - bis pa - cem.
4. Do - na no - bis pa - cem.

29. The Play of St. George

“As aforetime acted by the Dorsetshire Christmas mummers based on the version in The Return of the Native and completed from other versions and local tradition by Thomas Hardy.” This note appears on the title page of an edition privately printed by Mrs. Hardy in 1921.

Minus Dragon and Fool characters, this hero-combat play is typical of those performed throughout Wessex in the nineteenth century. Here the folk process has been furthered by the addition of some dialogue by Patrick Swanson and a sword dance from Ampleforth, but the lines remembered and recorded by Hardy remain, bringing an unusual poetic flavor to this old Dorset play.

33. Sussex Mummers' Carol

This traditional carol is sung as an ending to the folk play in Horsham, Sussex. In each of the ten American cities where Revels is produced annually, this carol is sung with the audience at the conclusion of each performance. The brass arrangement is by Brian Holmes, with descant and final verse harmonization by Ralph Vaughan Williams.

Our homage to Thomas Hardy and the West Country this season would not have been possible without many generous and valuable friends. These include Dave Townsend, noted authority on west gallery music and founder of the Mellstock Band. Closer to home, Bruce Randall has perpetuated and cultivated west gallery music-making in the Boston area for many years. We are also grateful to David Gay, artistic director emeritus of Revels North, who pioneered a Thomas Hardy production in Hanover, N.H., more than a decade ago and who brought Hardy’s adaptation of “The Play of St. George” to our attention. A very special thank you for housing the Mellstock Band to Janet Childs, the Beasley Family, and Renni Boy.
THE MISSION of Revels is to cultivate authentic cultural traditions and celebrate the cycle of the seasons — through staged performances of song, dance and drama, education programs, and opportunities for participation by all. This year The Christmas Revels is also being presented in Tacoma, WA; Portland, OR; Oakland, CA; Santa Barbara, CA; Boulder, CO; Houston, TX; Hanover, NH; New York, NY; and Washington, DC.

WEST GALLERY MUSIC
by Dave Townsend, Director, The Mellstock Band

The songs and tunes of country church bands and choirs of eighteenth and nineteenth centuries form one of the great lost heritages of English music. Suppressed from the 1840’s onwards, and neglected by more recent scholarship, it has unique vigor and excitement, as well as being accessible to singers and musicians of all abilities. This is “west gallery music” or “country psalmody,” the vigorous harmony singing tradition which flourished in rural English parish churches from the early 1700’s until the mid-nineteenth century. It was composed, adapted and taught by people of humble origins and little formal education, who produced music of extraordinary vitality and variety. It is rhythmic, full-voiced, and has a fascinating combination of wild harmonies and unorthodox counterpoint.

The choirs and their music are unforgettable portrayed by Thomas Hardy in Under The Greenwood Tree and other poems and stories, and some of the pieces in this Revels program come from the Hardy family’s own collection of manuscript books, and from other Dorset sources.

These tunes and harmonies were brought to North America in the eighteenth century, setting off a new tradition of “fasola” or “shape-note” singing that flourished at first in New England but then survived in the Southern states throughout the nineteenth century, thanks in part to the legendary publication The Sacred Harp and other hymn collections. Back in England, the music survives in the caroling traditions of Northern England and the West Country. These traditions, with their direct links to the old west gallery choirs and singing masters, suggest a style far removed from both the art music of the time and our present choral tradition. American shape-note singers use a powerful, open-throated tone, plentiful individual ornamentation, and driving rhythm, matching the exuberance of street carol singers in present-day Cornwall and Yorkshire’s pub carolers.

By the end of the eighteenth century it was usual to support each vocal line with an instrument, which might also play extra passages or “symphonies.” Descriptions of the last of the Dorset church bands in 1895, and of the “Big Set” in 1930’s Yorkshire, make it clear that the instrumentalists did not merely double the vocal parts (which are often all that survives), but improvised variations and independent supporting parts as well. Often the old bands also played for dancing, a fact that has informed the instrumental playing of The Mellstock Band in interpreting west gallery music.
Thomas Hardy and Change
by Patrick Swanson, Revels Artistic Director

At first blush, Thomas Hardy seems an unlikely figure to associate with Revels. A deeply romantic and at times, melancholy writer whose novels move (some would say obsessively) from passionate impasse to doomed relationship, he is not an obvious recruit for a hankie-waver in “The Lord of the Dance.” Moreover there is a gloomy leitmotif running through his work—the loss of the “old” ways of doing things. At the time of Hardy’s writing, steam trains were opening up the cities to the country and allowing unprecedented numbers of people to travel great distances easily. Spinning Jennies and other mechanical wonders were revolutionizing the production of textiles, canals were dissecting the countryside and enabling the transport of coal and heavy machinery. In the fields haybines and threshing machines were doing the work of a legion of redundant laborers who were left, hats in hand, lamenting the passing of centuries-old agricultural traditions and practices. Part of the tragedy for Hardy was that these old English work traditions were interwoven with a wealth of cultural treasure — the stories, the dances, the music — to him, the stuff of life. And here is where Hardy-world and Revels-world begin to intersect.

Under the Greenwood Tree was Hardy’s third novel; he describes it as “A Rural Painting of the Dutch School.” Its arc begins on Christmas Eve in a Dorsetshire village and moves through all the seasons of the year, while in the background loom the changes that were transforming England at every level. What is so attractive about the novel for Revels (besides the calendar theme) is the extravagance of wonderful characters and the details of mid-nineteenth century country life that include direct references to carols, instrumentation, seasonal customs and even mummers’ plays. Hardy himself wrote the mummers’ play that we have adapted in this show, cobbling together his childhood memories of Saints, Saracens and Doctors as a bona fide practitioner of the folk process.

Central to the novel is the story of the village quire, a collection of characters of almost Dickensian proportions, concerned about their future in the face of the new-fangled “harmonium” which threatens to displace them from their traditional place in the west gallery of the village church. West gallery music, as it came to be known, was robust, energetic and joyful. A touch too joyful for many of the clergy who frowned on the secularization of church music and the addition of folk instruments like the concertina, fiddle and serpent. Most country churches could not afford an organ, so the quires had to be tolerated until the invention of the portable organ which in time displaced the motley collection of instruments and characters that inhabited the back pews.

Revels, of course, as a dramatic form has its limitations. We have a limited ability to introduce characters to an audience, develop them, allow them time to have relationships, resolve dramatic issues and then contemplate upon the result. For this experience we strongly recommend the novel. What we can do is to allow the characters to climb out of the book and wander into Sanders Theatre where they will find us all ready to sing the old carols, to appreciate the “deep, rich note” of the serpent, to dance “The Triumph” and to savor the sub-Handelian instrumental flourishes that adorn their music and are known to the present-day in some Yorkshire and Derbyshire Christmas carol pub sings as “symphonies.” For the rest, we hope that you enjoy our thumbnail sketch of Thomas Hardy’s beloved Wessex and the sounds and sights that made it so dear to him. Perhaps if he was in the audience he might chuckle at one of the lines in his own mummers’ play. In hard times, perhaps this is ambition enough.
AN ENDURING MAGIC

by George Emlen, Revels Music Director

At the heart of Revels is the belief that singing has the power to transform and unite us. Many things have changed in my 25 years as Revels’ music director, but this has not. A surge of electricity still runs through Sanders Theatre as the chorus fills the stage with a brilliant swirl of color, and all voices — ours and yours — are lifted together in celebration.

My initial assignment back in 1984 was to choose and train an excellent chorus for The Christmas Revels. But I knew from my own long experience in the Revels audience that the real goal would be something deeper and more elusive — not only a wonderful sound but a confidence, energy and spirit in the chorus that would radiate through the audience, suffusing everyone with enthusiasm and joy. Achieving this quality has been my mission for the past quarter-century.

At the same time it is amazing to think of how much has changed. I once composed, transcribed, arranged and edited music using pencil, music paper, telephone and cassette tape. Today I create, modify, upload and download music in audio and graphic formats unimaginable in 1984. In one afternoon, thanks to iTunes and YouTube, I can hear and see dozens of international renditions of the same traditional song.

Revels has expanded its national scope from four to ten cities and our own staff to more than a dozen. Instead of a couple of LP’s, we now have a teeming catalogue of downloadable recordings (all downloadable), songbooks and choral arrangements. Revels is now a four-season production company, with salons and pub sings filling out the rest of the year. Our education program and touring company are ubiquitous.

Perhaps the most profound change is that we no longer have our founder John Langstaff in our midst. Jack was the dynamic, creative force behind every Revels production and the iconic figure who stepped forward to sing Lord of the Dance and lead the audience in song. He played another role on stage — quieter if just as powerful — moving gently through the cast with an infectious and playful energy, supercharging the atmosphere from within. Today his spirit guides us as we sail forth into the next generation of productions and projects.

When this year’s cast steps out onto the stage and you join them in song, you will be sharing in the annual recreation of the vital magic that is Revels. Feel it reverberate through this venerable theater, and carry it with you into the winter night, into the days that follow, and deep into your lives. This is the gift of Revels that will never change.

Banks of the Charles River at the Weeks Footbridge

Mark the passing of summer and the arrival of cooler days and nights at RiverSing, our celebration of the autumnal equinox. Thousands of singers join a massed choir, folk band and soloists with familiar songs of the season, as giant puppets sway to the music and saxophones call back and forth from boats on the river. Come early with family and friends for a picnic on the banks, or follow a boisterous procession from Harvard Square to kick off the event.

Revels Spring Sing

Friday, March 20, 2009
80 Mt. Auburn Street, Watertown, MA

Shake off the cold and drear of winter at Revels’ family celebration of the vernal equinox. Surrounded by sprays of forsythia and early greens, we will welcome in the spring with our favorite Revels’ songs and a couple of easy country dances for all. Midway we’ll pause for a seasonal mummers’ play performed by children from our Spring Workshop. We’ll end with delicious refreshments.

If you enjoyed the music in today's show, why not experience it again?

Please join us for

West Gallery Music

Do you harbor a secret belief that a lot of Handel would sound great when sung like a pub tune? Do you think the church choir would be more fun if you could play along with your fiddle? If so, join us to sing and play the psalm-tunes, hymns, and anthems of the English West Gallery tradition that Thomas Hardy's characters or Jane Austen and her preacher father heard on a Sunday morning.

Now in our tenth year, these monthly workshops are led by Bruce Randall, a performer in today's Revels and member of the West Gallery Music Association.

All singers and melody-instrument players are welcome.

For more information, please contact Bruce Randall at melismata@hotmail.com or go to our website at www.laymusic.org/wg.html

Also, be sure to visit the West Gallery Music Association’s website at: www.wgma.org.uk
